

Liberty's Campaign for Fairer Extradition Laws

We have campaigned for years against "fast-track" and unfair extradition. Extradition should never be used without the necessary safeguards to ensure it is fair and proportionate, and should always respect British traditions of justice.

The Coalition Government has pledged to review the operation of the Extradition Act and the US/UK extradition treaty. We will be urging them to review many other extradition arrangements and incorporate the following safeguards:

A British person should not be extradited to another country for actions that are not criminal in the UK.

A basic case should be made to a British court before someone can be sent abroad to face trial in another country.

If a significant part of the conduct that led to the alleged crime took place in the UK, then a British court should be able to decide if it is in the interests of justice to extradite.

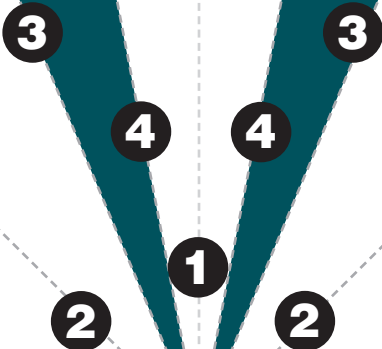

Take Action

Please email your MP and ask them to lobby the Government to implement our suggested safeguards to UK extradition law at www.extraditionwatch.co.uk
